Keith Harrell's philosophy centers around the belief that attitude shapes one's experiences and outcomes. He posits that while external circumstances are often beyond control, an individual's response to these circumstances is determined by their attitude. This mindset empowers people to take ownership of their reactions and maintain a constructive and optimistic perspective. The core idea is that attitude is not merely a passive feeling but an active choice that influences motivation, behavior, and ultimately, success.

Origins and Influences

The "attitude is everything" philosophy draws on principles from psychology, self-help literature, and leadership training.
